

Betsy Bevan, MM, composer, painter, writer, educator

Betsy lives a highly creative life; composing, performing, painting with a passion, writing and facilitating people in the joy of creativity. She's an award winning composer, self-taught artist and teaches world music at the Montessori School in Greensboro. She has a private music studio in which she teaches piano and composition and an art studio where she paints and works as an illustrator on various collaborative projects and composes for music and poetry performances. As a painter since 1995 she has developed her own style through her interest in the present moment process of making art. She takes brush to canvas and starts from where she's at, trying for honesty in what appears, always curious. Betsy has composed and produced music albums, has written a book, several poems and children' stories. She has worked with leading expressive artists and musicians, David Darling, through the Music for People organization, Stewart Cubley in process art painting and Toni Packer of Springwater center in Meditative Inquiry and awareness practice. She currently offers workshops and classes in Expressive Arts and Awareness practice and is being certified as an Expressive Arts Coach and Educator at the Florida Expressive Arts Institute. She lives in Greensboro, North Carolina.
