Workshop Report

Updated: March 8, 2017

Focus Question: What are the BIG questions to which you and society are being called to respond?

How do we care for all in the largest sense? (Does this include nature?)	What are comprehensive economic models?	How do we find a creative and meaningful role for everyone? (What is justice for all?)	What's the deep story we tell? (The human search for truth)
How to create/sustain an ethical system which provides safety for all human life? How to create a health care system which is fair and effective for all?	How to create/sustain an economic system which can support all human life ... if possible? Shape alternative economic organization? Should each person be allowed to expect to be economically provided for?	Develop individual empowerment to equality. How to create a system of justice which is balanced and fair to all subgroups of society? How to deal with persons who cannot or do not "fit" in "civilized" society?	How do religions communicate/dialogue at the worldview level? How do we know what is true?

Facilitated by: Elaine Stover. Participants: Bill Bingham, Lou Gordh, Nelson Stover, Rudy Gordh, Steve Barnes, Tom Duckwall.

The Worldview Salons on March 19, April 30 and May 21 will explore how changes in worldview affect the way individuals and societies respond to these pressing contemporary issues. Additional information about the Worldview Salon series, previous discussions and a contextual presentation is available on-line at www.EmergingEcology.org/worldviewsalon.html.
